When they are treated right We are treating everybody like kings this week.
At the least, we are going to try to, as well as the rush will allow. P. O. P. and the

Karnival Krewe

Can not afford to pass by our $25.00 and $25.00 Suits and $5.00 Pants.
But Few of the visitors to our Fall Festivities will fail to take advantage of our Kar-nival prices.

Kids Kan

Come out and blow their horns this week, but all the noise in Christendom will not change the fact that we are making fine tailoring at moderate prices.

A NOTED SCIENTIST DEAD.

PROFESSOR LOUIS PASTEUR OF PARALYSIS NEAR PARIS.

He was One of the Most Distinguished Chemists of France, If Not of the World, and His Studies in Contagious Diseases Gave Him Extended Fame.

Paris, Sept. 28.—Professor Louis Pasteur died at Garches, near St. Cloud, in the environment of this city, this evening at 8 o'clock.

Professor Louis Pasteur had suffered from paralysis for a considerable period of time. About eight days ago he sustained a violent paralytic stroke, and yesterday suffered still another severe attack.
He grew weaker rapidly and remained in a comatose condition during his last hours.
At 5 o'clock this afternoon he expired.
The end was absolutely without pain. His wife devotedly watched at his bedside.
His son, his physician, his daughter and his son-in-law, M. Valerydrad and two grandchildren, as well as Dr. Roux and Dr. Guantness, were present when he passed away. It is believed that the funeral of M. Pasteur will be national in character.

Professor Louis Pasteur has been gradually failing in health for some months, and recently the French papers announced the beginning of his end. His recovery was emphatically denied by his family and friends. They acknowledged the serious condition of the distinguished bacteriologist, but attributed it to local rather than to general causes.

Louis Pasteur was born at Dole, Jura, December 27, 1822, entered the university of Besancon, became a chemistry master of studies at the college of Besancon, was elected an assistant in the Ecole Normale in 1842, took the degree of doctor in 1847 and was appointed professor of physics at the faculty of sciences, Besancon, in 1848.
At the end of 1848 he was instructed as dean, with the organic chemistry, and in created faculty of sciences at Lille, and in 1857 returned to Paris and undertook the "famous" experiment of the "rotten" wine. In 1860 he was appointed professor of zoology, physics and chemistry at the Ecole Normale Supérieure, Paris, and was elected a member of the Académie des sciences. In 1864 he was elected a member of the Académie des sciences, and in 1865 he was elected a member of the Académie des sciences, and in 1865 he was elected a member of the Académie des sciences.

Louis Pasteur has written numerous works relating to bacteriology and chemistry, for which, in 1881, he obtained the Nobel prize.

In 1874, the national assembly accorded to M. Pasteur, as a reward, chiefly for his investigations on fermentation, a life annuity of 100,000 francs. He was raised to the rank of grand officer of the Legion of Honor, October 22, 1875.

His death was a great loss to France. He was a man of great energy and courage, and his work has been of great service to the world. He was a man of great energy and courage, and his work has been of great service to the world. He was a man of great energy and courage,
and his work has been of great service to the world.
